BIOGRAPHY

Mathew Harwich is a creative technologist, composer, trumpet performer and teacher, media producer, and photographer based in Upland, California. His work connects artistic expression with the technical care that brings an idea into form.

AI-assisted development is central to his current practice. He designs and builds native Mac apps, websites, and digital workflows, using AI to explore, implement, and refine working products. His projects include One Big Note, released on the Mac App Store, and Behalf, a tool for organizing career information.

Mathew earned his BFA at CalArts in 2011, studying performance and composition with Edward Carroll and Barry Schrader. He has served as principal trumpet with the Pasadena Community Orchestra and Southland Wind Ensemble, performed with Millennial Choirs & Orchestras, and appeared with Lemaitre at Coachella in 2016. His teaching includes private instruction and trumpet teaching and summer band direction at Orion International Academy in 2026. He scored Dave Aldrich's Dreaming Awake films and trailer, including Fort Funston, First Place winner at the 6th NorCal Free Flight Film Festival.

He also records and edits concert audio and video, with work for LA Winds and the Pasadena Community Orchestra. In 2021, he created and produced SCSBOA's virtual honor ensemble concerts, assembling individual performances into complete musical productions. His photography spans portraits, performance, promotional work, and nature, including a longstanding role as exclusive photographer for Irish Dimensions Dance Company.

Across music, images, and software, his approach is grounded in observation, listening, and revision: an interest in how something works, and in how it feels to experience.
